George Lister Sutcliffe was born in Tordmorden, Yorkshire, England in 1864. He was articled to his father, John Sutcliffe (1845-1915?), in Todmorden, Yorkshire, from 1880 to 1885 and he remained as his assistant. In 1890 he qualified as an architect and from 1895 to 1906 was in partnership with his father and James Henry Sutcliffe in a practice based in Tordmorden and Hebden Bridge, Yorkshire. In 1902 G.L. These included Brentham, a 66-acre estate in Ealing, London (based on a masterplan by Parker & Unwin), and Liverpool Garden Suburb (1913), for which Sutcliffe designed a number of houses. He also acted as architect for other companies and designed housing in Hampstead Garden Suburb in London including Meadway Court.

Two photographs showing the exterior and the entrance hall of a house in Mayfield (Sussex?), designed by Sutcliffe are illustrated in 'The Studio Yearbook of Decorative Art' 1911 (p.74).

Sutcliffe was the author of 'Concrete. Its Nature and Uses. A Book for Architects' (London: Crosby Lockwood & Co., 1893) and 'Sanitary Fittings and Plumbing' (London: Periodical Publications, 1898). He was also editor of 'The Principles and Practice of Modern House-Construction' (London: Blackie, 6 volumes, 1898-99),
