

Nicholson, Christopher 'Kit' 1904 - 1948

Christopher David George Nicholson [commonly known as Christopher Nicholson; also known as Kit Nicholson] was born in Hampstead, London, on 16 December 1904. In 1923 entered Jesus College, Cambridge, and initially studied English, but switched to architecture and enrolled at Cambridge University School of Architecture. After graduating in 1926, he continued his architectural studies at Princeton University School of Architecture in Princeton, New Jersey, where he remained until 1927.

Following his return to England, Nicholson worked on a small scale architectural commissions, including a garden house at Brampton in Cumbria, for Charles Roberts, and the Carlisle Memorial in Brampton. In 1929 he returned to Cambridge University School of Architecture where for the next two years he was employed as a student assistant and began teaching first year students. He also worked briefly in the London office of Myer & Watson-Hart.

In 1933 Nicholson set up an independent practice in London. In 1935 he was joined by Hugh Casson.

In addition to his work as an architect, Nicholson designed several stands for exhibitions and trade fairs, including the 'Britain Can Make It' exhibition at the Victoria & Albert Museum in London (1946), Textile Section of the British Industries Fair held at Earls Court in London (1947) and the Sanderson stand at the Daily Mail 'Ideal Homes' exhibition in London (1948).

During World War Two Nicholson served in the Fleet Air Arm of the Royal Navy. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects (FRIBA) in 1939). Nicholson was killed in a gliding accident in Italy on 28 July 1948.

The Royal Institute of British Architects Drawings Collection owns Nicholson's complete collection of drawings, record books and photographs.
