

Thomson, Sandilands & MacLeod 1914 - ?

Thomson Sandilands & MacLeod originated as Thomson & Sandilands, an architectural partnership formed in Glasgow, Scotland in 1886 by John Thomson (1859-1933) and Robert Douglas Sandilands (1854-1913). The partnership was formally dissolved in April 1914. It was re-formed later that year as Thomson Sandilands & MacLeod with Alexander Hood Macleod (1889-1941) as a third partner. Sandilands' name was retained in the title even though he had died a year before it was established.

In the years up to World War One Thomson & Sandilands worked on a wide variety of commissions, particularly church work and for private clients. Following the war as Thomson Sandilands & MacLeod they secured a range of industrial commissions, including a number of warehouses in Glasgow.

Thomson, Sandilands & MacLeod continued until the 1950s with the name unchanged well after the death of all three partners.

Worked in
UK
Works

See Dictionary of Scottish Architects 1720-1980 for a chronological list of architectural work by Thomson, Sandilands & MacLeod from 1915 to 1941. See also Historic Environment Scotland [links below]

Links

- Dictionary of Scottish Architects 1660-1980

http://www.scottisharchitects.org.uk/architect_full.php?id=204183

- Historic Environment Scotland - 39 architectural projects by Thomson & Sandilands and Thomson, Sandilands & Macleod

<http://portal.historicenvironment.scot/hes/web/f?p=1505%3A200%3A%3A%3ANO%3ARP%3A:::>