

Johnson, T. H. & Son c. 1922 - c. 1996

T. H. Johnson & Son was an architectural practice established in Wadsworth, Doncaster, Yorkshire, England in the early 1920s by Thomas Henry Johnson (c.1872-1937) and his son, Henry Arthur Johnson (1903-?), who had studied at the Bartlett School of Architecture, University College, London.

Following the death of his father, Henry Arthur Johnson continued T. H. Johnson & Son with the name unchanged for some years. The firm was finally dissolved in c.1996.

Worked in
UK
Works

Co-operative Emporium/Danum House, Doncaster (1938-40)

Bibliography

Harwood, Elain. Art Deco Britain: Buildings of the Interwar Years. London: Batsford, 2019

Links

- The National Archives - Johnson & Son, architects. 1928-69 bill book, files and plans <https://discovery.nationalarchives.gov.uk/details/c/F168763>
- The National Archives - Papers of T H Johnson and Son of Doncaster, Architects. <https://discovery.nationalarchives.gov.uk/details/r/04f05371-f20a-4f39-baa9-f66d961e2545>