

Champneys, Basil 1842 - 1935

Basil Champneys was born in Whitechapel, London, England on 17 September 1842. After studying at Trinity College, Cambridge, he was articled to John Prichard (1817-1886) diocesan surveyor of Llandaff, Wales. In 1867 he commenced independent practice as an architect in Queen's Square, London. He soon became acquainted with William Morris, the offices of whose firm Morris & Co. was located nearby.

Champneys was one the first architects to adopt the new Queen Anne Style. He also worked in Gothic, neo-Jacobean and English Renaissance styles.

He was appointed architect to Manchester Cathedral in 1893. He was a founder member of the Art Workers Guild in 1884. In 1912 he was awarded the Royal Institute of British Architects Gold Medal although he was never a member of that Institute because he regarded architecture as an art allied to painting and sculpture rather than a profession.

Champneys exhibited regularly at the Royal Academy in London from 1874 to 1894. He also exhibited at the Royal Glasgow Institute of the Fine Arts in 1893. A sketch for a cabinet designed by Champneys with gesso panels by Henry Holiday was shown at the Arts & Crafts Exhibition Society in London in 1896.

Champney's address was given as 39 Great Marlborough Street, London in 1874; and 19 Buckingham Street, London in 1881. From 1881 until his death on 5 April 1935 he lived at his home, Oak Hall, Frognal Lane, Hampstead, London.
