

Geldart, Ernest 1848 - 1929

Ernest Geldart [commonly known as Rev. Ernest Geldart; Father Ernest Geldart; and as Rev. E. Geldart] was born in Holloway, Middlesex [now London] England on 2 May 1848 and was articled to Alfred Waterhouse (1830-1905) in London in 1864. He remained at Waterhouse's office until 1871 when he left to study theology at King's College London. He was ordained a deacon in 1873 and a priest in 1875. After various curacies, he was appointed rector of the Church of Saint Nicholas, Little Braxted, Essex in 1881.

Following his appointment Geldart set about decorating the church with a series of paintings and murals. He subsequently worked on the alteration, decoration or restoration of nine other churches in Essex and several others elsewhere in the country over the next two decades. He also designed the rood screen for St. Mary the Virgin in Kettlebaston, Suffolk in 1890

He was an authority on architecture and decoration, and the author of a number of books on the subject including The Art of Garnishing Churches (1882) and A Manual of Church Decoration and Symbolism (1899).

For reasons of ill-health Geldart retired from Little Braxted in 1900 and moved to Holmbury St. Mary, Surrey where he turned to design, working in stained glass and embroidery.

He died in Holmbury St. Mary, Surrey on 11 July 1929
