

Newton & Cheatle c. 1891 - ?

Newton & Cheatle was an architectural partnership formed by Thomas Walter Francis Newton (1862-1903) and Alfred Edward Robie Farmer Cheatle (1871-1941) in Birmingham, England in 1892. The practice had offices at 125-131 Newhall Street, Birmingham. They designed a wide range of industrial, commercial and domestic properties, mainly in the Birmingham area. The influence of the Arts and Crafts movement is discernible in much of the practice's work.

Following the death of Newton in 1903, Cheatle continued the practice. In 1927 he was joined by Charles Stanbury Madeley (1887-1962).
