

Jackson, George Edward

George Edward Jackson practised as an architect in Hull, Yorkshire, England in the early years of the twentieth century. Drawings and plans of a house designed by him are illustrated in Designs for One Hundred Ideal £1,000 Houses. Being copies of the hundred best designs entered in the 1912 Daily Mail Architects' Competition (1912 p.63). His address was given as 41 Dover Street, Hull.

Note: further information has been traced on this architect

Worked in
UK