

de Soissons, Louis 1890 - 1962

Louis Emmanuel Jean Guy de Savoie-Carignan de Soissons [commonly known as Louis De Soissons and as Baron Longroy Viscomte d'Ostel, and Louis DeSoissons] was born in Montreal, Quebec, Canada, on 31 July 1890. His family moved to Britain while he was a child and he was educated in London.

In c.1906, at the age of 16, he was articled to the architect John Henry Eastwood (1844-1913) and studied at the Royal Academy Schools in London and the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in Paris. He also attended the British School at Rome on a RIBA Henry Jarvis Scholarship awarded in 1913. The year before he had been awarded the Tite Prize.

Following World War One (during which time he served as liaison officer to Italian Army), he was in partnership with Philip Hepworth (1919), and George Grey Wornum (1921-30). de Soissons was known for his work in the field of public housing and town planning in Britain, particularly at Welwyn Garden City in Hertfordshire, England, where he was appointed architect in 1919.

During the 1920s he was in partnership with Arthur William Kenyon (1885-1969) as De Soissons & Kenyon. Together together they designed houses in Welwyn Garden City, Hertfordshire.

From 1942-69 de Soissons was consultant architect for the Joseph Rowntree model village New Earswick in York. During World War Two, de Soissons was appointed the Imperial War Graves Commission's Principal Architect for the Mediterranean, and designed several cemeteries and memorials in the region.

Following the war, de Soissons was senior partner in the architectural firm Louis De Soissons, Peacock, Hodges, and Robertson and was involved in the rebuilding of the bombed centre of Plymouth in Devon. Other projects in which he was engaged included the restoration of the Nash terraces in Regent's Park, and buildings at Cheltenham College de Soissons was elected an Associate of the Royal Institute of British Architects (ARIBA) in 1918 and a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects (FRIBA) in 1923. His address was given as Blue Ball Yord, 64 St. James's Street, London in 1923 and 1939. He died in London on 23 September 1962.
