

White, Charles Stanley 1893 - 1966

Charles Stanley White [also known as C.S. White and as Charles S. White] was born in Farnham, Surrey, England on 10 January 1893 and trained at the Architectural Association in London. He was elected an Associate of the Royal Institute of British Architects (ARIBA) in 1922. In the early 1920s he was in partnership with (?) George in the architectural firm White & George. They had an office at 34 Bedford Square, London. The practice collaborated with the architectural firm Curtis & Natusch to design a licensed house for the Worshipful Company of Brewers

He was later in partnership with Guy Llewellyn Morgan and Duckworth Roberts as Guy Morgan & Partners. in London. The partnership was dissolved in February 1937 and White immediately formed a new partnership with Keith Murray (1892-1981) as Keith Murray & C. S. White (Murray & White). In 1937 they were commissioned to design the new Wedgwood factory at Barlston in Staffordshire (built 1938-40). The Murray & White partnership was probably dissolved in 1939 following the outbreak of World War Two. During the war Murray served in the Royal Air Force from 1940 to 1942.

White was elected a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects (FRIBA) in 1936.

In 1945 Murray set up the architectural practice Murray, Ward & Partners with Basil Ward (1902-1976). By 1950 Murray and White had formed a new partnership with Stanley Churchill Ramsey (1882-1968) which operated as Ramsey, Murray & White [Ward's name did not appear in the title of the practice]. In 1955 Ward became a partner in the practice which was renamed Ramsey, Murray, White & Ward. The firm designed numerous industrial and office buildings, including the Hong Kong air terminal and the British European Airways engineering base in London airport.

White's address was given as 34 Bedford Square, London in 1923 and 1926; 66 Blakemere Road, Welwyn Garden City, Hertfordshire in 1930; 9 Gower Street, Bedford Square, London in 1935; and 19 Russell Square, London in 1939. He died on 6 January 1966. His address at the time of his death was Pear Tree Cottage, Park Corner, Freshford, Bath, Somerset.
