

Harper (Ewen & J. Alfred) 1897 - 1937

Ewen & J. Alfred Harper [also known as Ewen Harper, Brother & Co.] was an architectural partnership formed in Birmingham, England by Ewen Harper (1853-1920), his brother, James Alfred Henry Harper (1866-1952) in 1897.

The Harper brothers were fervent Methodists and in addition to designing a wide range of commercial, industrial, public and domestic buildings, were responsible for designing a large number of non-conformist churches. Most of the practice's work was in the Birmingham area. Notable among their projects was the Methodist Central Hall in Birmingham in 1900-03.

Ewen Harper died in 1920. The year before, he had retired and his son, Leonard Ewen Harper (1886-1954) had joined the practice which continued as Ewen Harper, Brother & Co.

The dissolution of the partnership was announced in The London Gazette, 5 October 1937 p.6177 and it was stated that "Leonard Ewen Harper F.R.I.B.A. will continue to practise for commercial and other work under the old firm name of 'Ewen Harper Brother & Co.' at Ruskin Chambers 191 Corporation Street Birmingham as heretofore, who will shortly take into partnership his Sons Bernard Ivan Harper and Dennis Rosslyn Harper. James Alfred Henry Harper (the Senior Partner in the old firm) and his Son Walter Geoffrey Harper will continue to practise from the 30th September at Union Chambers, Temple Row, Birmingham under the style of 'J. Alfred Harper & Son.'"
