

Ashbee, Charles Robert 1863 - 1942

Charles Robert Ashbee [commonly known as C.R. Ashbee] was born in Isleworth, Middlesex, England, on 17 May 1863. After studying history at King's College, Cambridge from 1883 to 1886, he was articled to George Frederick Bodley (1827-1907) of Bodley & Garner in London. Whilst working in Bodley's office he lived at Toynbee Hall, a university settlement in Whitechapel, east London, where he started classes in the arts and crafts. These evolved into the Guild and School of Handicraft, a craft workshop which he launched on 23 June 1888 at 34 Commercial Road, a warehouse building next to Toynbee Hall.

Apart from Ashbee, the Guild initially consisted of four workers who made furniture, metalwork and painted decorations. In 1891 the Guild relocated to Essex House, at 401 Mile End Road, London. In 1895 the enterprise was renamed The Guild of Handicraft. By 1900 it was employing about forty men who now included jewellers, silversmiths, enamellers, and blacksmiths. In March 1898 they took over the staff and presses of William Morris's Kelmscott Press to form the Essex House Press which the Guild ran until 1905.

In early 1902 the Guild relocated again. This time to Chipping Camden in the English Cotswolds, where they re-established a workshop. Although the venture was successful at first, the Guild began to run into financial difficulties by 1905 and in late 1907 and in the autumn of 1907 it was decided that the Guild should go into liquidation.

Following the collapse of the Guild, Ashbee continued to live in Chipping Camden with his wife, Janet, whom he'd married in 1898. During World War One he spent much of his time lecturing in the USA and in 1917, took a post as lecturer at the Sultania training college in Cairo, where he taught English. In 1918 he was commissioned by the military governor, Ronald Storrs, who asked him to write a report on the planning and repair of the Jerusalem, which was then under British administration. He subsequently moved with his family to Palestine where he remained until he resigned from his post in 1922. After another lecture tour of the USA, Ashbee and his family settled in Godden Green, Kent.

Ashbee was the author of numerous books and articles on architecture, town planning, the decorative and applied arts, and other matters. For details of all known writings by Ashbee see Appendix four. A list of C. R. Ashbee's published writings in Alan Crawford, C. R. Ashbee. Architect, Designer & Romantic Socialist by (New Haven, CT: Yale University Press 1985 pp.484-486.

Ashbee was elected a member of the Art Workers Guild in 1897 and Master of the AWG in 1929. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects (FRIBA) in 1907 and was also a member of the Arts and Crafts Exhibition Society, an Honorary Member of the Vienna Secession and an Honorary Corresponding Member of the Deutsche Bildender Künstler. Ashbee died in Godden Green, Kent on 23 May 1942.
