

Sellars, James 1843 - 1888

James Sellars was born in the Gorbals, Glasgow, Scotland on 2 December 1843 and was articled to Hugh Barclay of Barclay & Watt in Glasgow at the age of 13 in 1857. He left Barclay's employ in 1864 and from 1864 to 1867 worked as an assistant in the office of James Hamilton, an architect with practices in Glasgow and Belfast. He left Hamilton after three years and in 1870 joined the office of Campbell Douglas (1828-1910) in Glasgow. By 1872 he was a partner in Douglas's practice which became Campbell Douglas & Sellars. They remained in partnership until Sellars' death.

The influence of Alexander 'Greek' Thomson (1817-1875) is evident in much of Sellars' work.

Sellars was admitted a member of the Glasgow Institute of Architects in 1872. He died at his house, 9 Montgomerie Crescent in Glasgow on 9 October 1888, the result stepping on a rusty nail at the 1888 Glasgow International Exhibition. The incident led to blood poisoning.
