

Carøe, William Douglas 1857 - 1938

William Douglas Carøe [also known as W.D. Carøe] was born in Blundellsands, near Liverpool, England, on 1 September 1857. His father was the Danish consul in Liverpool. After studying at Trinity College, Cambridge from 1875 to 1879, Carøe was articled to Edmond B. Kirby (1838-1920) in 1879-80, and to the church architect John Loughborough Pearson (1817-1897) from 1881 to 1883. During his time with Pearson, Carøe worked on drawings for Truro Cathedral.

Carøe set up his own independent practice in London in 1883 and was in partnership for a period with J.H. Christian with whom he designed The Paddock in Leopardstown, Co. Dublin (1885) and Hanover Schools in Gilbert Street, Grosvenor Square, London (1889). In addition to his work with Christian, Carøe was also in partnership with Herbert Passmore (1868-1966) from 1903.

In 1885 Carøe was appointed architect to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and subsequently worked on numerous church projects. His secular work included various, schools, banks, shops, offices flats, and country houses, Carøe exhibited frequently at the Royal Academy in London from 1905 and 1935. He also exhibited the Royal Scottish Academy in Edinburgh, the Glasgow Institute of the Fine Arts, and at the Walker Art Gallery in Liverpool. He was elected a member of the Art Workers Guild in 1889 and a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects (FRIBA) in 1890. He was President of the Architectural Association in 1895-96.

Carøe was the author of several publications including Sefton (1893) and King's Hostel, Trinity College, Cambridge (1909) and The Importance of the Historical Buildings of Cyprus (1931). He also edited 'Tom Tower', Christ Church, Oxford:

some Letters of Sir C. Wren to J. Fell (1923).

After retiring, Caröe moved to Cyprus and built for himself in Kyrenia where he died on 25 February 1938.
