

Cornelius-Wheeler, Frank 1879 - 1935

Frank Cornelius-Wheeler [also known as Frank Cornelius Wheeler] was born in Southsea [or Portsea Island - sources differ], Hampshire, England in 1879. In the 1911 England Census he gave architect as his occupation, however, nothing is known about his training as an architect. Drawings and plans of a house designed by him are illustrated in Designs for One Hundred Ideal £1,000 Houses. Being copies of the hundred best designs entered in the 1912 Daily Mail Architects' Competition (1912 p.115).

In the 1920s he was a partner with Percy Neville Wood and George Dearie Russell in a boiler-making firm in London. The partnership was dissolved in 1926.

Cornelius-Wheeler's address was given as Trerose, Homefield Road, Sudbury, Middlesex in 1911; 18, Old Cavendish Street, Oxford Street, London in 1912; and Flax Cottage, Roydon, Essex, and 29, Bedford, Row, London in 1933. He died in Epping, Essex in 1935
