

Briggs-Baumfeld, Ella 1880 - 1977

Ella Briggs-Baumfeld [also known as Ella Briggs] was born Ella Baumfeld in Vienna, Austria-Hungary on 5 March 1880.

As women were not allowed to train as architects in Austria-Hungary at this time, she studied painting and embroidery for two years at the Wiener Frauenerwerbsvereines in Vienna and painting from 1901 to 1906 at the Kunstgewerbeschule in Vienna.

In 1903 she visited the USA, possibly to see her brother, Moritz, who had emigrated to the USA in 1899. In 1904 she was awarded a medal at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis, Missouri. In September 1907 she married Walter J. Briggs [formerly Brix], an Austrian-born lawyer, in New York. They were divorced in 1912, however, she kept his surname. During this period, she began to develop a reputation as an interior decorator and designer. She decorated and furnished the New York Press Club building and rooms in the German Theatre in New York.

She had returned to Vienna by 1914, and by which time gave as her profession as "architekt" [Meldearchiv Wien - Vienna Registration Archives], although she did not train as an architect until 1918 when she entered the Technische Hochschule in Munich. After she graduated in 1920 she worked in the office of a construction firm in Vienna. Soon after, because of the lack of commissions, she went back to New York and designed a few houses. She then moved to Philadelphia, where she was mainly engaged on renovation work. She also produced plans for single-family houses for American magazines. The plans of could be obtained from the magazines. In the 1920s she travelled to southern Italy to work on a book on national architecture,, however, it was never published.

Baumfeld returned again to Vienna in 1924 and designed housings for the Westen Baugesellschaft, and for the Vienna city authorities she designed the Pestalozzihof, a residential block of 119 dwellings which was built in 1925. She also designed a smaller block on the Bellrothstrasse in 1926. In 1927 she moved to Berlin, where she ran a successful architecture office. Her projects included a large apartment block in Berlin-Mariendorf, housing for the unemployed in Blankenfeldand, and a number of single-family house.

Baumfeld was the first woman to be admitted to the Österreichischer Ingenieur- und Architekten-Verein (ÖIAV). She was also a member of the Vereinigung bildender Künstlerinnen Österreichs (VBKÖ), Bund Deutscher Architekten (BDA),

When the National Socialists came to power Germany Briggs, who was Jewish, was expelled from the BDA and barred from practising as an architect. She fled to England in September 1935 and settled in London. It is not known when she was granted a permit to work as an architect in Britain. She acquired British citizenship in 1947 and by that time was in practice in Enfield, Middlesex. She was also elected an Associate of the Royal Institute of British Architects (ARIBA). She designed a housing scheme for Bilston Corporation in the 1940s. She died in London in 20 June 1977
