Oliver Falvey Hill [commonly known as Oliver Hill] was born in London, England on 15 June 1887. Following school he was apprenticed to a firm of builders. Between 1907-10 he was articled to William Flockhart (1852-1913). He also studied part-time at the Architectural Association, London.

Hill began in private practice in 1912. Following service in the Army during World War One (1914-18), he built up a highly successful practice as both an architect, interior designer and exhibition designer. His early work in the 1920s, such as Sandhill, Aldeburgh (1923-25), Cock Rock, Croyde (1925-26) and Knowle, Warwickshire (1923-29), show the influence of Edwin Lutyens, a family friend. The influence of Hollywood has been detected in Hill’s work during the late 1920s, particularly in some of his Spanish hacienda style houses, such as Marylands, Hartwood (1928-29).

Following a visit to the Stockholm Exhibition of 1930 he seems to have embraced Modernism. His first project in the Modernist style is generally accepted to have been Joldwynds, Holmbury St Mary (1932-34). Other significant architectural projects in the 1930s included the Midland Hotel, Morcambe (1932-33), Frinton Park Court, Frinton on Sea (1934) and Landfall, Poole (1936-38). For these and other projects Hill commissioned decorative features by several of the leading contemporary artists and designers including Marion Dorn, Eric Gill, Syrie Maugham, Edward Bawden and Eric Ravilious.

Hill also contributed to the design of some of the most important architecture and design exhibitions in Britain in the 1930s including the industrial art exhibitions at Dorland Hall Exhibition, London (1933, 1934), and the Royal Academy, London.
(1935); and designed the British Pavilion at the 1937 Exposition des Arts et Techniques dans la Vie Moderne in Paris. In 1930 Hill set up the short-lived Rondo company with the purpose of displaying and marketing modern decorative art.

Hill’s architectural work following World War Two show a reversion to his Lutyenesque style of the 1920s. In 1951 he designed the ‘Cotswold Tradition’ exhibition, which coincided with the Festival of Britain that year.
