

Young, Robert Magill 1851 - 1925

Robert Magill Young was born in Westmeath, Athlone, Ireland on 6 March 1851. He was articled to his father, Robert Young (1822-1917), in Belfast in 1866 and subsequently worked as his assistant. He also studied at Belfast Royal Academy, Queen's University of Ireland, and at the Government School of Art in Belfast.

He commenced independent practice in Belfast in 1872 and from 1880 was in partnership with his father and John Mackenzie (1844-1917) in their practice Young & Mackenzie. Following the death of his father and Mackenzie in 1917 he continued to run the practice, with the name unchanged, in partnership with his son, James Reid Young (1884-1967).

Robert Magill Young was elected a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects (FRIBA) in 1907. He was also a member of the Belfast Architectural Association, Royal Irish Academy, Fellow and Vice-President of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland, and the Ulster Society of Architects, and its President on a number of occasions.

From an early age Young contributed papers on antiquarian and architectural subjects to various learned societies. He wrote an account of the Antiquities in Bute (1870) for his uncle Dr. James Bryce's "Geology of Arran". Edited the Town Book of the Corporation of Belfast (1613-1816) in 1892, which was followed by "Ulster in '98", published in 1893. "Historical Collections relative to Old Belfast", 1898, and "Belfast and the Province of Ulster in the Twentieth Century", 1908.

He died at his home, Rathvarna, Chichester Park, Belfast, on 19 November 1925
